100 Red Planes Raid Tachens Eisenhower

Biggest Air Blow Of Chinese War; Two Shot Down

TAIPEH, Formosa, Jan. 10 (A)-At least 100 Chinese Red planes today pounded the Tachen Islands from dawn until late afternoon in the greatest air raid of the civil war, the Defense Ministry announced.

Nationalist defenders on the vital outpost islands 200 miles north of Formosa threw up fierce antiaircraft fire. They claimed two attackers were destroyed and two damaged. There was no indication whether Nationalist planes were engaged.

Peiping radio heard in Tokyo said four naval vessels in Tachen harbor were "destroyed or damaged" in the raid and insisted all attacking planes returned "safely from their successful mission."

It was too early to say whether the air blows presaged an invasion which the Nationalists believe is bound to come.

MIGs Escort Bombers The Communists threw into the attack propeller-driven light bombers and fighter bombers, which were escorted by at least 28 swift MIG jet fighters, a communique said. All three types are made by

Asks Power To Cut Tariff

President Declares 15% Slash Essential To Security Of U.S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (A) President Eisenhower asked Congress again today for power to lower tariffs 15 per cent as part of a program to improve foreign trade and bulwark "the forces of freedom" in their struggle against

"It is essential for the security of the United States and the rest of the free world," Eisenhower said in a special message, "that the United States take the leadership in promoting the achievement of those high levels of trade that will bring to all the economic strength upon which the freedomand security of all depends." Would Extend Law

As the President himself noted, the "moderate, gradual reciprocal program" he proposed was largely a repetition of the one that got nowhere in the last Congress.

The heart of it is a renewed request to continue the reciprocal trade agreements law for three years, with additional authority for Eisenhower to cut tariffs by 5 per cent each year. He promised there would be "no sudden or radical tariff reductions."

With Democrats in control of Congress now, the program may get friendlier treatment than it did last year. It was the Democrats On Costa Rican who launched the reciprocal trade Congress have set a high priority for extending it on the basis Eisen-

1955 CHRYSLER NEW YORKER DELUXE 4-DOOR SEDAN

AN EXCITING NEW DIRECTION in motorcar styling begins with Chrysler for 1955 . . . longer, and inches lower than other big cars, in the most striking new car design of recent years! Noteworthy is the new sweptback Super-Scenic Windshield that "wraps around" both top and bottom for greater (and safer) vision. All Chryslers are now V-8's, with engines up to 250 hp. The new Chrysler look of mobility and purposeful power is further translated into action by the most automatic transmission in any car . . . exclusive Chrysler Full-time Power Steering . . . and Power Brakes with a new, safer acting double-width brake pedal. By all odds, this is definitely the car to look at and drive first in 1955!

Cumberland Marks • Its Bicentennial

Cumberland is in the enviable position of being 200 years old, one of comparatively few cities in America that can make such a claim.

Cumberland's history goes back even to the days before there was a United States of America and the part our city has played in the development of our country is dramatic indeed.

Here between the mountains was the natural route that led to the West. Here George Washington got much of his early training in things military. Here is a city so rich in history that few other communities in America can touch it.

Cumberland has a marvelous opportunity in this bicentennial year to capitalize on its virtually endless supply of historical lore. But the job must be done

Dozens of other cities have marked anniversaries and taken advantage of the opportunity to tell their stories to the nation. This is Cumberland's chance to point out dramatically to thousands upon thousands of Americans just how fine a city we have here and to recall to their minds that our city has been built on a rich historical heritage by hardy, forward-looking people who would not turn back because of hardship.

In the past few years, in order to tell the Cumberland story, events to attract attention were virtually dreamed up and Cumberland reaped the benefit of favorable publicity for miles around.

Now we have at our disposal a "natural" with which to tell the Cumberland story.

It is something that cannot be done overnight if it is to be done right, and for that reason we are happy that the Mayor and Council has acted promptly in naming a committee to direct the bicentennial observance. This small group of 23 members will need much help from the community in developing the kind of observance that a bicentennial year deserves.

We hope and know that this community cooperation will be forthcoming.

But as we celebrate our beginnings, we must not lose sight of the fact that we cannot live in the past and prosper. We can justly point to our heritage with pride but we must ever keep our eyes on the future, as did the pioneers who first set foot at the juncture of Wills Creek and the Potomac River.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

Can France Forgive?

Mendes-France was correct when, at the beginning of the recent debate, he said that a small majority was not enough. He wanted a large majority; he did not get it. Furthermore, the nature of the debate was distressing; it was as anti-American as it was anti-Russian, if not more

If leading Frenchmen speak of the West Germans as Revanchists-those who seek vengeance-what are these Frenchmen? They live in the shadows of 1870, 1914, and 1939. Bismarck, Wilhelm II and Hitler still ride their memories. They fear Germany more than they do Russia, because Germany is closer at hand. Since Napoleon, France has not been at war with Russia, except some small participation in the Crimean War. The present living generation of France seems always to have been at war with Germany.

That Mendes-France could deliver any majority at all is a remarkable political achievement. Pitted against him were the greatest figures of France actuelle, and also the vocal masses of the people who dislike the United States, possibly because the United States has helped France so much. We have repaid our debt to Lafavette a millionfold-but that was too much and people are always suspicious of the overlygenerous. There is something of the parvenu in that.

At any rate, Mendes-France comes out of it all as the one man in France who, since the end of the war, could get an agreement through without capsizing the government. Now his problem is to outlast the intrigues of his

France suffers from a multiparty government which arises out of a system of proportional representation that proliferates until almost, to exaggerate a point, each deputy is a political party unto himself. It is a worse arrangement than the uniparty systems of the totalitarian countries because it makes for irresponsibility in government. The uniparty systems make for tyranny. Governmentally France is approaching anarchy.

When a French premier wants to carry a measure, he has to go among the various parties peddling his wares like a hawker, making deals, arranging for places in his cabinet, often doing things which are distressing. The dignity of office as the dignity of person goes by the board under such circumstances. Mendes-France took the abuse which came to him over the Christmas week with fortitude and a courage wholly unexpected. It ought to make an impression on his countrymen as it has upon the people of this

The real immediate danger to France lies neither in Germany nor in Russia but in complete and total isolation. Those elements in France which sought to use a critical, if not crucial, international situation, to damage an individual, to pay off private and political scores, were risking too much. For if the United States and Great Britain deserted France, there would soon be no France. And that was proved beyond doubt in both World War I and World War II. France cannot defend herself because she cannot create an industrial base to defend herself.

Furthermore, the geography of Europe is such that France can easily be invaded and has often been, not only by Germany, but by the English in the good old days when the kings and queens of England owned pieces of France. Today, with modern weapons, France's first line of defense is the city of Washington on the West and the Elbe River on the East and all the patriotic speeches of M. Herriot will not change that. If those defenses are unavailable to France, an armed West Germany, or a united Germany under Russian guidance, could take France and hold her-unless the United States came to

That is what the situation is and nothing can be done about it because the interplay of geography and new weapons makes it that way. From a practical standpoint, the United States acts as an umbrella over France. This may be humiliating to a Frenchman who recalls the glories of Louis XIV and the victories of Napoleon, but the Wrights' "Kitty Hawk" set a pace which is now too swift for those who live in the memory of the bygone achievements of foot soldiers. Besides, France no longer can produce the foot soldiers in sufficient numbers.

The difference between Mendes-France and his outraged colleagues is that he faces reality and they face only the past.

But Kun Nom, and Som Si were as efficient a catering service as any in Washington. On the morning of December 31, they reported that my 35 dollars had provided a cow, half a buffalo, and several ducks and chickens; plus about 15 gallons of white mule for the common people with a specially invigorating and precious bottle of white mups mixed with black monkey's blood for the honored guests; plus the most celebrated player of the ken, a local instrument halfway between bagpipes and pan pipes; plus prizes to persuade the young ladies to dance, which they are reluctant to do without suitable in-

There was also the usual group who could not resist the temptation for "just one nightcap," so the Lotus Lake village was still ringing with song in the dawn. But as a party it was a clear success.

Cumberland Marks Its Bicentennial

Cumberland is in the enviable position of being 200 years old, one of comparatively few cities in America that can make such a claim.

Cumberland's history goes back even to the days before there was a United States of America and the part our city has played in the development of our country is dramatic indeed.

Here between the mountains was the natural route that led to the West. Here George Washington got much of his early training in things military. Here is a city so rich in history that few other communities in America can touch it.

Cumberland has a marvelous opportunity in this bicentennial year to capitalize on its virtually endless supply of historical lore. But the job must be done right.

Dozens of other cities have marked anniversaries and taken advantage of the opportunity to tell their stories to the nation. This is Cumberland's chance to point out dramatically to thousands upon thousands of Americans just how fine a city we have here and to recall to their minds that our city has been built on a rich historical heritage by hardy, forward-looking people who would not turn back because of hardship.

In the past few years, in order to tell the Cumberland story, events to attract attention were virtually dreamed up and Cumberland reaped the benefit of favorable publicity for miles around.

Now we have at our disposal a "natural" with which to tell the Cumberland story.

It is something that cannot be done overnight if it is to be done right, and for that reason we are happy that the Mayor and Council has acted promptly in naming a committee to direct the bicentennial observance. This small group of 23 members will need much help from the community in developing the kind of observance that a bicentennial year

We hope and know that this community cooperation will be forthcoming.

But as we celebrate our beginnings, we must not lose sight of the fact that we cannot live in the past and prosper. We can justly point to our heritage with pride but we must ever keep our eyes on the future, as did the pioneers who first set foot at the juncture of Wills Creek and the Potomac River.

These Days

Can France Forgive?

Mendes-France was correct when, at the beginning of the recent debate, he said that a small majority was not enough. He wanted a large majority; he did not get it. Furthermore, the nature of the debate was distressing; it was as anti-American as it was anti-Russian, if not more

If leading Frenchmen speak of the West Germans as Revanchists-those who seek vengeance-what are these Frenchmen? They live in the shadows of 1870, 1914, and 1939. Bismarck, Wilhelm II and Hitler still ride their memories. They fear Germany more than they do Russia, because Germany is closer at hand. Since Napoleon, France has not been at war with Russia, except some small participation in the Crimean War. The present living generation of France seems always to have been at war with Germany.

That Mendes-France could deliver any majority at all is a remarkable political achievement. Pitted against him were the greatest figures of France actuelle, and also the vocal masses of the people who dislike the United States, possibly because the United States has helped France so much. We have repaid our debt to Lafayette a millionfold-but that was too much and people are always suspicious of the overlygenerous. There is something of the parvenu in that.

At any rate, Mendes-France comes out of it all as the one man in France who, since the end of the war, could get an agreement through without capsizing the government. Now his problem is to outlast the intrigues of his

France suffers from a multiparty government which arises out of a system of proportional representation that proliferates until almost, to exaggerate a point, each deputy is a political party unto himself. It is a worse arrangement than the uniparty systems of the totalitarian countries because it makes for irresponsibility in government. The uniparty systems make for tyranny. Governmentally France is approaching anarchy.

When a French premier wants to carry a measure, he has to go among the various parties peddling his wares like a hawker, making deals, arranging for places in his cabinet, often doing things which are distressing. The dignity of office as the dignity of person goes by the board under such circumstances. Mendes-France took the abuse which came to him over the Christmas week with fortitude and a courage wholly unexpected. It ought to make an impression on his countrymen as it has upon the people of this

The real immediate danger to France lies neither in Germany nor in Russia but in complete and total isolation. Those elements in France which sought to use a critical, if not crucial, international situation, to damage an individual, to pay off private and political scores, were risking too much. For if the United States and Great Britain deserted France, there would soon be no France. And that was proved beyond doubt in both World War I and World War II. France cannot defend herself because she cannot create an industrial base to defend herself.

Furthermore, the geography of Europe is such that France can easily be invaded and has often been, not only by Germany, but by the English in the good old days when the kings and queens of England owned pieces of France. Today, with modern weapons, France's first line of defense is the city of Washington on the West and the Elbe River on the East and all the patriotic speeches of M. Herriot will not change that. If those defenses are unavailable to France, an armed West Germany, or a inited Germany under Russian guidance, could take France and hold her-unless the United States came to

That is what the situation is and nothing can be done about it because the interplay of geography and new weapons makes it that way. From a practical standpoint, the United States acts as an umbrella over France. This may be humiliating to a Frenchman who recalls the glories of Louis XIV and the victories of Napoleon, but the Wrights' "Kitty Hawk" set a pace which is now too swift for those who live in the memory of the bygone achievements of foot soldiers. Besides, France no longer can produce the foot soldiers

The difference between Mendes-France and his outraged colleagues is that he faces reality and they face only the past.

It turns out now - as the new report reveals - that the derogatory information about Major Peress was known inside the Pentagon at least a year before the McCarthy Committee took up the issue. It develops also that General Zwicker knew all the facts and evidently the Wisconsin senator knew that he knew them. Hence the refusal of General Zwicker to testify frankly before the Senate subcommittee appears now to have been either because he was ordered to cover up for his superiors or because he was gagged by his superiors who knew that if he told all the facts it would corroborate Senator McCarthy's line of inquiry.

If Joe McCarthy had not yielded to his exasperation that day to make a denunciatory comment about General Zwicker - or, if he had later withdrawn it but insisted that there was a cover-up for which the general was not to blame - the

But if the egg becomes fertilized, it imbeds itself in the wall of the uterus and develops into an embryo. Meanwhile, the inner lining of the uterus prepares for pregnancy by becoming softer, thicker, and more spongy and a hormone is produced that prevents menstruation from taking place.

In non-pregnant women the menses usually appear every 20 to 35 days; the most common cycle is 28 days and the flow lasts an average of four to seven days. Deviations from these normal variations call for investigation.

Irregularities may be traced to a: anatomical defect in ovaries or uterus. A tumor or blocking of the opening of the womb may exist but a disorder of the glandular system is the most likely culprit. The glands work in harmony and a disturbance of the pituitary, adrenals, or thyroid may be responsible for upsetting the menstrual flow.

Milady's physical and mental health also influences her periods. Diabetes, nephritis, anemia, malnutrition, obesity, and cancer lead to changes as do alcoholism and morphine addiction.

Irregularities may be noted on changing climate or schools or after a death in the family. These peculiarities are difficult to explain except on the basis of the effect of psychological factors on the glandular system.

but this column is scooping him on his final report as chairman of the Government Operations Commit-

Though McCarthy hit the headlines almost every day of his career as chairman, his report is as dull as dishwater. Obviously his flair for the spotlight is considerably greater than his desire to make a constructive record of his committee's accomplishments. The report also shows that McCarthy devoted scant time to his over-all commitee, chiefly concentrated on his subcommittee on communism. Portions of his report are so abrupt and deadpan as to be amusing. For instance, his only mention of the famous Army-McCarthy hearings, which absorbed the nation for weeks, is a complaint over the cost.

"A special subcommittee was appointed on April 20, 1954, to conduct hearings on charges and countercharges involving Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens, John G. Adams, H. Struve Hensel; and Senator Joe McCarthy, Roy M. Cohn and Francis P. Carr," observes the McCarthy report, dead-

"This subcommittee was authorized to expend funds (approximately $25,000) for its investigative activities. A resolution providing for reimbursement of these funds to the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations was reported favorably on July 28, 1954. but no action was taken, and the subcommittee was not reimbursed for these extraordinary expendi-

Hawaiian Recreation

Aside from this, the final Mc-Carthy report ranges over a lot of miscellaneous subjects including money spent on bathing beaches and recreation in Hawaii by the armed forces. Joe's sleuths went out to Hawaii to probe the question of whether servicemen's recreation was "involving an unnecessary investment in (recreational) property valued at in excess of $22 million and annual expenditures of approximately $4 million."

After "an extensive study of the charges and countercharges," the sleuths couldn't make up their minds who was right. So they passed the buck to the committee, recommending only that "hearings should be held in an on-the-spot investigation." But McCarthy was too busy with other matters. McCarthy also reports that his committee put pressure on the federal government to withdraw from business activities which compete with private industry. "The committee has been informed that further aggressive steps are being taken to initiate programs designed to eliminate unnecessary federal activities which are found to be in competion with private business, and that comprehensive directives are now in preparation to carry out this program on a government-wide basis," reads the secret copy of Joe's re-

Probe Of Panama Canal

The report also reveals a backstage battle with the Panama Canal Company, which made the mistake of flouting McCarthy's committee. As a result, Joe ricked his bloodhounds on the company.

"The Panama Canal Company failed to cooperate in supplying information requested by the committee relative to action taken to evaluate and carry into effect the numerous recommendations made by the General Accounting Office." complains McCarthy. "The company, while admitting that there was merit in many of the recommendations, took the position that its only responsibility was to the Committee on Appropriations. In view of this attitude of non-cooperation, the committee directed the staff to make further studies of the operations of the Panama Canal Company.

The staff promptly uncovered 'major deficiencies in organization, management and responsibility . . . Inadequacy of planning and policy-making; and unwarranted domination of the secretary of the army and the military establishment over the Panama Canal enterprise.

"To correct these deficiencies," adds the report, "the comptroller general recommended that the Panama Canal Company and the Canal Zone government be combined in a single, civilian, independent executive branch agency, administered by a single civilian administrator or a small civilian board of no more than three mem-

Lotus Lake Village

By Joseph Alsop

This reporter is currently recovrecording on a higher level than the expense account, if only because it was a dinner-dance for 150 people that cost 35 dollars.

It was born of a decision to day in this lovely northeastern region of Thailand, which is also the most exposed to Communist pressure and the most penetrated by fifth columns. When I got here, my friend Rod Hemphill, who runs a local silk factory, said no one could understand northeastern Thailand without getting the feel of village life.

It was a pity, Rod added, there was no village party coming up, because going to a village party was the best quick way to see what a Thai village was really like. And so I asked whether I might give a New Year's Eve. party at the village of the Lotus Lake, where Rod's silk factory is situated.

Efficient Catering Service

From there, Rod's charming and intelligent Thai partner, Kun Nom, and the extremely able, tough village headman, Som Si quietly took over. There were a couple of preliminary crises, about the price of the cow that was to be the main dish, and about the difficulty of obtaining the truly superior brand of local white mule that is made across the Mekong River in Laos. But Kun Nom, and Som Si were as efficient a catering service as any in Washington. On the morning of December 31, they reported that my 35 dollars had provided a cow, half a buffalo, and several ducks and chickens; plus about 15 gallons of white mule for the common people with a specially invigorating and precious bottle of white mups mixed with black monkey's blood for the honored guests; plus the most celebrated player of the ken, a local instrument halfway between bagpipes and pan pipes; plus prizes to persuade the young ladies to dance, which they are reluctant to do without suitable inducement.

Rod and his beautiful wife, Annong, and I set off for the party in the late afternoon. The children of Lotus Lake village were driving the village buffaloes home from their wallow; the herons were gloriously winging their way back to the heronry by the Lotus Lake, and the lowering sun was gilding the rice straw in the fields. But this perfect atmosphere of pastoral NONGKHAY, Northeast Thailand peace was shattered, when we reached the ballroom (Rod's silk ering from giving a New Year's factory). Som Si had insisted on Eve party which perhaps deserves installing the powerful American public address system that the village bought last year to brighten up its festivals.

Really Got Going

The noise of alternating records spend Christmas and New Year's of Bangkok songs, local ballads and arias from Thai classical opera was downright deafening. Besides half the village was already there. The white mule was already going round. And the conversation was beginning to show that added brightness that always marks the cocktail hour.

The first item on the program was the idea of the village eldersto wind the bai see strings which bring good luck on the arms of Rod, Annong and me. The ceremony involved sitting on the floor through an interminable, imitation Pali chant, and being wound with the strings while all those not busy string winding held hands to strengthen the life forces.

After that, the party really got going. The white mule circulated rapidly, by an efficient loving cup system. The cow and the buffalo appeared in the form of laap, which means that they had been chopped fine with the fierest red peppers available, extra seasoned with spices and rather summarily cooked, with laap and curry and salad and white mule in plenty. The usual second stage of every party, when the conversation almost overtops the music, was easily reached.

Then the ken player took over the microphone. With many a shy gesture, the young ladies took the floor, and the village bucks stepped out for the circle dance. This involves revolving, very remotely, around your partner, making elegant hand and arm gestures. An American buck would find it unexciting, but Thai bucks think differ-

Clear Success And so we reached the party's final phase, which continued, with louder and louder music and faster and faster circle dancing, until all could wish one another a happy new year. There were the usual late party incidents - the headman's son went a bit too far, as headmen's sons so often will. There was also the usual group who could not resist the temptation for "just one nightcap," so the Lotus Lake village was still ringing with song in the dawn. But as a party it was a clear success.

GAMBLING DOESN'T

dollars either!

A used car is a major purchase; it doesn't pay to gamble your dollars away on a long shot. Be sure you buy from a reputable dealer who stands behind the cars he sells. It's better to pay a little bit more for satisfaction, than a little bit less and lose it all.

OUR USED CARS ARE-

Thoroughly reconditioned for appearance and performance. You can be proud of the way the car looks, and pleased with the way it performs.

Honestly represented and honestly sold. Every car bears the lowest possible price consistent with our isfied customers only!

Backed by our reputation as a Pontiac Dealer. We're not throwing that away for a few fast dollars in the used car business. We're in the business of selling cars to stay - and we aim to protect our good name.

soldiers' bonus question, vetoed after passage in the 1954 session, An eighth veto, on postponing scheduled increases in automobile registration fees, received no action but was put off until tomorrow afternoon in the Senate. The vetoed measures were the first legislative item on the first full week's calendar of the 90-day

Of the four bills which originated in the House of Delegates and therefore came up for action there first after being rejected by the governor, the only close vote came on a measure to give municipalities authority to set their own traffic speed limits. The veto was sustained 72-46, two short of the necessary 74 votesor three-fifths of the House membership-necessary to override.

This was the only veto which the Democratic leadership seemed inclined to override, but Majority Floor Leader Boone (D-Balto County) said his little speech in favor of overriding was "purely a suggestion.
